" Has the Chinese Government shown any desire to employ American engineers in the construction of steamships and railways? Such was the question put to Mr. John Russell Young by a San Francisco interthe ex-Minister to China; and there the sub ject dropped. The higher class of Chinese are a proud people, and the restriction act, which the American Congress passed, affects them only in touching their pride. It does not deny them any privilege which they desire their countrymen to the St. Nicholas without his signing articles, enjoy. As a matter of fact, the rulers of China are as anxious to prevent the emigration of Chinese from the empire as the Californians are to prohibit Chinese immigration to this State. But the exclusion of Chinese from free immigration to this country, has offended their pride. Li Hung-cliang spoke with much feeling upon the subject on his account. He said that America permits the immigration of Japanese, negroes, the natives of the Islands of the Pacific, but prohibits the Chinese from going to the country. But I know that outside of this feeling of offended pride, the rulers of China, and the higher class Later on his Worship said he would reconsider of Chinese have not the slightest objection to the restriction act. In diplomacy, however, the fact that America has discriminated ship and to his receiving the advance from the against China is often used as a reply to requests for extraordinary privileges for Americans. It thus serves them as a foil when all American claim is being pressed, or when a treaty revision is suggested, or when America seeks any advantage in China. But beyond its being thus used, as a convenient off-set in diplomatic discussion, the Chinese are indifferent to it. Indeed, the laws of the empire are much more > prohibitive in regard to emigration than the provisions of the restriction act. The Chinese who come to this country are from Hongkong, a British colony, wholly outside of the jurisdiction of the Chinese Empire. LONDON, 8th July. A Sun cablegram from London of July 7th says:—The Pall Mall Gazetts this afternoon served a second course of its unpleasant exposures of vice. Some terrible iniquities are dragged forth to the light of day. Dates and localities are plainly stated, and apparently the only concealment attempted is in regard to the names of the rich and titled ruffians who have I trafficked in the chastity of women. In many cases these are described with such accuracy that it would be a superfluous piece of information, even to casual readers of newspapers, to add their names. The stories evidently are not fictitious. for the paper challenges libel suits by printing the street numbers of many houses rented and used for the purposes of wealthy debauchees. The owners or occupants of these houses have abundant cause of action against the Pall Mall Gazette, whether the stories are true; or false, for in England. No suits have yet been began against the paper, and the presumption is that the parties concerned do not care to risk the publicity which suits for libel would involve. There is a general impression that the revelations of the Gazette, horrible as they are, are in the main true. The questions that remain are whether it is justifiable

The exposure is the leading topic of conversation on 'Change, in clubs, in railway carriages, and wherever men meet together. The editor of the Pall Mall Gazette said in an interview today, that the exposure had not been made without careful advice from learned jurists in regard to every detail, and that he kept not only within the pale of the law, but far within the bounds which natural and honest indignation would have prescribed. As to the law he knew he was justified, and as to public opinion he feared nothing, for he was backed by the highest and best in the land, including Cardinal Manning. the Earl of Shaftsbury, and other emisent men of all denominations.

The accompanying editorial article to-day is short, but more aggressive than any begun. The editor not only defies, but invites prosecution, but he warns intending prosecutors that many names will necessarily be revealed during the trial of any cases brought against him. Some men, he says, will be spared until the last, on account of their honest wives and worthy sons and daughters, of whom they were unworthy fathers. If such men choose to lead the attack, they will, he says, be sheltered behind women whom they know they are unworthy to

The cumbersome machinery of the Home Office for the suppression of newspapers cannot be lightly put in operation. but any inspector can order the arrest of persons selling what he deems to be an obscene publication. Hence it happens that while the Pall Mall Gazette's presses are running night and day, and the papers are being sold by the truck-lead for circulation throughout the three kingdoms, ten newsvenders have been arrested on a charge of selling indecent prints. The prisoners were taken before Lord Mayor Fowler and promptly released or remanded under nominal hail. The Lord Mayor expressed the opinion that the editor of the Gazette was actuated by 50 the highest motives. He said that if a crime had been committed in pointing out a nest of crimes the publishers should first be dealt with. after which there would be time enough to prosecute the men and boys who bought and sold the paper in the ordinary course of trade. The office of the Gazette is in a state of siege. A shricking mob has possession of the sidewalks. News venders, regular and irregular, are pressing forward to buy copies of the paper at a shilling a plece. Eight policemen are on duty forming the purchasers into line. They are admitted at one entrance, where tickets for the papers are bought, and as soon as they receive the papers called for by their tickets they go out of another door and begin to sell the papers at almost any price they choose to ask. The sale of papers at the office is not only telerated but regulated and facilitated by the police, but as soon as the vender begins to sell his wares on the street he is liable to arrest. At the editorial rooms of the paper everybody is apparently serone. Letters have been received fromhundreds of elergymen, statesmen and merchants thanking the editor for the exposures already made, exhorting him to keep on with the good work and promising their support in any way it can be

At the clubs the principal occupation is fitting the names of accused persons to the descriptions in the Gazette. In many cases the descriptions are so accurate that nothing is left to conjecture. In other cases there is a good deal of guesswork. The names of members of the royal family and of the highest nobility are freely bandied about. Many aristocrats are howling with rage, and their anger is intensified by its impotence. If they deny the truth of any individual case, they are met with the awkward question. " How do you know?" In the Reform Club it has been proposed to expel Mr. Thompson, owner of the Gazette, for allowing the exposures to be made

Mr. Gladstone said he held stronger views on the question as one of principle, and believing that the House had acted unconstitutionally and illegally [Liberal cheers] he would support Mr. Hopwood. It was the duty of the House to legislate in the direction of removing an existing grievance. The present Parliament throughout had grievously wronged the electoral of Northampton. It was therefore the duty of the House to redress that serious wrong. [Cheers.] Mr. Gladstone thought, however, that the scope of amendments should be narrower in dealing with the case before them. The motion of Hicks-Beach was adopted by a vote of 263 to 219. After the vote had been taken Mr. Bradlaugh readvanced to the table and said he would obey the Speaker's orders and withdraw. the House granted time for their discussion. Mr. Gladstone supported the motion because he thought it was desirable to speedily wind up the business of the session. In regard to the foreign policy, Mr. Gladstone said he believed it was the duty of the late Government to support the present Government in the presecution of important national aims. The Statement was. in the main, correct that Russia had promised Zulficar to the Ameer. The Government, Mr. Gladstone said, would have his best support in all reasonable efforts to bring that question to a settlement. Referring to the Egyptian question Gladstone admitted that the Government ought to avoid committing itself, and should be allowed time in which to obtain the fullest and best advices. As the question of finance was of the first importance to the Egyptian Government it was settled nothing could be done. Mr. Gladstone, in connection with Irish affairs, said he regretted that a controversial matter had been introduced in this debate. CONSERVATIVE ELECTION PROSPECTS.

London, 4th July. The results of the Parliamentary elections which took place during the past week, to fill vacancies caused by the change in the Ministry, have rather alarmed the Liberals. They were beginning to feel sure of an easy victory in the coming general elections, but the Tories have more than held their own in the special pollings. and have increased their majorities in such hotly contested boroughs as Wakefield and Woodstock. It anpears that a Mrs. King had been suffering for many years with some disease of the stomach which had resisted the treatment of all the physicians in attendance. The disease commenced with a slight dorangement of the digestion, with a poor appetite, followed by a peculiar indescribable distress in the stomach, a feeling that has been described as a faint "all gone" sensation, a sticky slime collecting about the the morning. This sensation was not removed by food, but on the contrary, it was increased. The eyes then became tinged with yellow, and were sunken. After awhile the hands and feet became cold and sticky—a cold perspiration. There was a constant tired and languid feeling. Then followed a dreadful nervousness, with Terrible reports of devastation by storms and gloomy forebodings. When rising suddenly. there came a dizzy feeling like vertige. After a time the bowels became costive, so that it was difficult to procure a movement without a cathartic. Soon followed a disposition to spit up fermented condition.
